The July Clearance Sales

Those twice-yearly store-wide events involving every one of our seventeen departments begins tomorrow.

The very life of a store is to keep stocks moving—to keep everything fresh and bright and simply sparkling with newness.

We have kept this fact well in mind ever since the first season of this store's existence and the clearance sales are held twice each year just for that very purpose.

The more business we do—the greater these sales become for great business leaves in its wake more and more small lots which must be grouped together and priced regardless of everything but that they must be sold at once.

Consequently thousands of dollars worth of desirable seasonal merchandise is involved in these clearance sales at prices that should bring people from far and near.

Women's Suits

TELLS OF TWO BOMBS

UNKNOWN WRITER TO NEWSPAPERS WARNS OF INFERNAL MACHINES IN BUILDINGS.

Boston, July 15.—An afternoon paper announces the receipt of an anonymous communication in which the writer, describing himself as a German spy, states two bombs have been placed in the custom house and another in the custom house tower. Also, the governor is to be killed, according to the message, which was crudely lettered with a lead pencil. It was given to the police, who recently examined a similar threat against the custom house without determining whether the writer was a crank or a joker.

Herrick Urges Farmers to Organize. Hot Springs, Va., July 15.—In an address on "The Need of Rural Credit" before the National Farmers' association convention, Myron T. Herrick, former ambassador to France, urged as a remedy for whatever trouble exists in rural communities the establishment of co-operative organization of farmers.

Alleged Triple Slayer is Killed. Macon, Ga., July 15.—A posse of citizens and county officials shot and killed Peter Jackson, a negro, accused of killing three white men near Cochran, Ga. The negro had barricaded himself in his home and defied the posse, which, according to reports received here, blew up the house with dynamite.

Ohio Methodists Have Outing. Akron, O., July 15.—Six thousand people attended the annual outing of northeastern Ohio Methodists at Silver Lake park. Big delegations were present from Youngstown, Niles, Warren, Girard, Newton Falls and Akron. Bishop McDowell of Cincinnati delivered an address.

Retired Banker Kills Self. Pittsfield, Mass., July 15.—Arthur George Sedgwick, 70, and retired after an active career in the banking and brokerage business, shot and killed himself in a local hotel.

Wife Dies, Husband Held. Cincinnati, O.—Albert Schweitzer, whose wife was fatally burned in their home, was charged with murder. Patrolman Schroeder, who arrested the man after the death of the wife at the General Hospital, swore to the warrant. A lamp struck the bed in which Mrs. Schweitzer was sleeping with her two children, Clifford, eight, and Stanley, one, and all were burned. Schweitzer was injured. He told the officer it was an accident, but the wife said that Schweitzer, who had been drinking, threw the lamp on the bed.

Enlarges Parcel Post. Washington, D. C.—Postmaster General Burleson has ordered that the size limit of packages for parcel post shipment be increased to a combined length and girth of 84 inches, which will permit the mailing of standard sized fruit and berry crates. The old limit was 72 inches length and girth, and there has been a widespread demand for its increase. The postmaster general also authorized the establishment of a receipt system for parcel post packages similar to that employed by express companies.

Minding One's Own Business

If there is one thing more than another that a great many persons seem really to enjoy, says the Ledger, it is minding other people's business and attempting to manage their affairs for them; and take it all in all, there is no occupation that can be followed that pays less interest on the investment. Nobody ever yet got rich minding other people's business, but a great many have attained wealth and honors by looking out for their own to the neglect of all other occupations. This tendency to look after other people is born largely of conceit, and inordinate opinion of one's own ability, and is more highly developed in people who are notoriously weak in judgment than in any other class of individuals. The really wise, clear-headed, far-seeing friend usually has quite enough personal matters to see to without desiring to monopolize the cares and burdens of others.

It is a curious fact that the very people of whom we would gladly ask advice are very chary of giving it, while those whose counsel is not worth a rap thrust their opinion and assistance upon us from all quarters. As a comprehensive proposition, it may be said that those who have themselves made a success in any line are safe advisers, but these people rarely meddle, and still more rarely are they willing to assume charge of any affairs that they can avoid. But these interested persons, these people who attach themselves to others and cling like barnacles, who have never accomplished anything themselves, and never will while time lasts, these are they who are never satisfied with the way we have managed our concerns. But they are ever ready with hand and tongue to help us out with their usually worthless advice.

One of the wisest men of the generation that brought his children up with the thoroughly ingrained idea that nothing was so valuable to the individual as the habit of minding one's own business. So deeply fixed was this part of their instruction that more than once when some trifling disturbance occurred on the street or in the neighborhood, these people put themselves as far as possible out of reach of it with all convenient dispatch. This man's theory was that if one stayed around where there was trouble it was impossible to avoid getting into it, and that the safest and best way to do was to get as far away as one could. It is needless to say that, acting upon such a principle, the family was comfortable, prosperous, thoroughly respected and rarely got into difficulties of any sort. He taught the family that of all paying occupations the most profitable was studiously and industriously to mind one's own business and let that of other people entirely alone.

Attracting Attention Edward was the proud owner of his first pair of pants. On the occasion of his first wearing these in a neighborhood where he was chatting with his father, but, much to Edward's disgust, the all-important subject was not mentioned. The little fellow stood it as long as he could, then, in a very indignant manner, remarked: "There are three pairs of pants in this room."

ALFALFA SEED PEST DANGEROUS

Harvesting Severely Infested Crops, Cleaning Fence and Ditch Banks, and Winter Cultivation, Are Methods Recommended.

The alfalfa seed destroyer, known as the chalcids fly, does its destructive work in clover or alfalfa seeds, from the Gulf coast to the northern limits of the United States, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture's specialist, who has personally seen the widespread devastation of this pest. By harvesting severely infested crops, by cleaning fence lines and ditch banks, and by winter cultivation, the grower of alfalfa seed may help to control this insect. A new Farmers' Bulletin No. 636, entitled "The Chalcids Fly in Alfalfa Seed," gives the details of these methods of control, and may be had free of charge on application to the department.

The chalcids fly, under the microscope is a formidable looking insect, but when seen in the field it is frequently confused with the gnat. These pests may be seen in great numbers flying over alfalfa seed shocks and swarming over the sickle bar when the alfalfa is being cut. The eggs are so small as to be invisible to the naked eye, and are deposited through the soft, green pods directly into the soft seeds when the pods are about half grown. Immediately upon becoming a fly the insect eats its way out through the shells of the infested seeds, then through the green pods. Large portions of the seeds are hollowed out in this manner when they are still green and growing.

The infested seeds, which still contain the living larvae of the insect, may be recognized by their abnormal shape and usually by the dull brown color. Some of the infested seeds, however, retain their natural color, but they always lack the glossy appearance of normal seeds. The extent to which alfalfa seed is damaged by the fly is not generally apparent, owing to the minuteness of the insect and because its destructive work is accomplished within the growing seeds. The alfalfa seed grower can only estimate the percentage of his crop destroyed by opening a large number of the seed pods and observing the infested seeds.

Wire Fencing and Trees

In running wire fences it may be necessary or desirable to attach the wires of trees along the fence lines. In many regions old fence rows have grown up naturally to trees; in others, wind-breaks have been planted between fields, making tree lines to which wire fencing may be attached without the labor and expense of setting posts.

In attaching wires to trees, however, it is bad practice to fasten them directly to the trees, for when this is done the wire will be grown over and embedded within the tree itself. This has a number of disadvantages. Not only do the wounds mar the appearance of the tree, but they also afford entrance for diseases which cause decay. In the second place, the tree is ever cut for lumber either the best part of the trunk has to be thrown out and wasted, or else if the wires and staples are deeply embedded, the tree may be saved into without any knowledge on the part of the sawmill men that the wires are there. The results are likely to be disastrous to the saw, and may even endanger human life. Further, it is impossible after the wire is grown over to move the fence without cutting the wire or chopping deep into the tree.

It isn't so bad to take things as they come, if you only know what to do with them.

Abner Metzger is Dead. The Salem News says: Another pioneer resident of this vicinity, Abner Metzger, aged 88 years, departed this life at his home on Sharp street Monday evening, as the result of a severe attack of pneumonia which later developed heart trouble and dropsy as final complications. Deceased, the last of his immediate family, was born in Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, August 27, 1826, and when a very small boy moved with his parents to a farm near Austintown, Mahoning county. At that time, he used to relate, the country was still wild, and he told stories of having seen wolves roaming about the woods and had many other thrilling pioneer experiences as a lad. In 1846, he married a Miss Sarah A. Borton, and for years he and his wife and their family of nine children lived near Greenford, where they were widely known. Through his long life, Metzger was a laborer, working on farms, in stone quarries and at various other occupations, enjoying the best of health during almost all that time. About 10 years ago they removed to the late home on Sharp street, where he was assisted by his wife and a dozen children: Lewis P. Metzger, Mrs. W. H. McCave and Joseph Metzger of this city; John, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Hannah Borton, of Valley; Mrs. Laura Klingschmidt, near Washington, Pa.; Mrs. Rose Zimmerman, near Greenford. Funeral services were held at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the McCave home on Wilson street.

Two Old Newspapers. Copies of two old newspapers have just come to the Dispatch. The oldest is The Emancipator, an anti-slavery publication, printed in New York, bearing date Dec. 21, 1837. Its editor was Joshua Leavitt, and its subscription price $2 a year. It is a six-page sheet, and nearly all the paper is devoted to matter touching on the murder of Rev. E. P. Lovejoy at Alton, Ill., by a mob of ruffians who destroyed his printing press Nov. 7, 1837. Its title was changing to print in favor of the abolition of slavery. No effort was made by the authorities to repress the violence of the mob which first fired the office and shot down Lovejoy when he attempted to extinguish the flames. On the margin of the paper, written with ink, is the name, C. R. Fowler, grandfather of the Dispatch publisher, showing him to have been a subscriber to The Emancipator. During the anti-slavery agitation he was among the most active abolitionists in Mahoning county. He was assaulted on several occasions and threatened with death. When addressing an abolition meeting in Ellsworth he narrowly escaped being tarred and feathered. But he never faltered in the task he had set for himself and lived to see slavery abolished and the country again united.

The other old paper referred to is a copy of the Canfield Weekly Herald, published by Edward Fitch, dated April 22, 1869—46 years ago. It is less than half the size of the Dispatch and subscription price was $1.50 a year. The paper contained less than two columns of local news matter outside of the three columns of local cases as being the county seat. Geo. M. Tuttle and Philo B. Conant were the common place judges. J. M. Nash, clerk, Charles Townsend sheriff, and Asa W. Jones, prosecuting attorney. Mention is made of work being started on the construction of the Niles & New Lisbon railroad. A fire at the residence of F. G. Servis is noted. There is a good showing of advertisements, considerable space being occupied by Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Boston, Youngstown and Warren advertisers.

It's all right to rise in the world and don't go up by the skyrocket route.
